How can Lloyd's licences help you transact multinational business?

	Overview	What this means for multinational
Flexible	Policies may be written by managing agents in London or locally via a wholly owned subsidiary (service company) or third party underwriting agent (coverholder) where licences permit.	Insurance can be provided where the customer wants it, or where there is the most appropriate underwriting expertise; whether that is in-country, a local hub or London.
Ready to use	Immediate access to the full suite of Lloyd's licences globally allowing managing agents to operate on a 'plug and play' basis.	Managing agents benefit from Lloyd's management of trading rights and do not have to seek local regulatory approval when writing business in a new market where licences are held.
Removes complexity	Coverage can be structured through a single policy that functions as 'local' insurance in markets where coverage is provided.	Insureds do not need to wait for local policies to be issued in each market of a multinational programme, removing delays from the placement process.
Capital Efficient	Managing agents benefit from the Corporation's chain of security and central fund to satisfy local capital requirements.	There is no need to capitalise overseas branches or subsidiaries to provide direct coverage, improving managing agents' capital efficiency.
Cost effective	Licences are maintained by the Corporation and Lloyd's leads all engagement with local regulators on behalf of the market.	Managing agents are therefore able to benefit from international compliance efficiencies and centralised regulatory reporting.

Lloyd's licences can provide the flexibility to write business from London, a local hub or in-country
